

Do you want to understand the prevalent sustainability themes and trends in your sector?

Would your organisation benefit from a sustainability review?

Would you like help with ESG reporting?

Are you interested in finding out how you can improve your sustainability position?

If you answered 'YES' to any of the questions above, then partner with us for a FREE consulting project with postgraduate students, from October to December 2025.

These days companies face significant pressures when redesigning their business strategies and business models to become socially and environmentally sustainable.

Students from our MSc in Sustainability and Management programme can help you:

- identify the prevalent sustainability themes and trends in your sector,
- apply a range of methodologies, such as stakeholder mapping, double materiality analysis, GAP and PESTEL analysis, sustainability SWOT analysis,
- review your existing position and help you define your priorities moving forward,
- suggest realistic and actionable sustainability related goals, and
- highlight pathways for integrating and communicating sustainability.

"It was very clear what the group was proposing and they presented practical and specific costed examples of things we could do to improve." Creative Industry Partner

There is no fee to be involved and the time commitment is minimal. We ask you to:

- meet with students (on campus or online) for the initial briefing (mid October) and final presentation (December)
- host a virtual check in with your student team each week/fortnight, and
- respond to queries / provide access to secondary data as required for your student team to report back effectively.

"The presentation content was really great, especially the way that the materiality survey was used to clearly articulate priorities." Data Services Industry Partner

If you would like to find out more, please register your interest here or contact Sarah Peel for an informal chat: s.e.peel@bath.ac.uk 01225 385030